Behind the scenes at Rutland Memorial Hospital

Staff at Rutland Memorial Hospital have produced a video showing what it is like to work on the busy inpatient ward.

It is part of a campaign to recruit more staff to work at the hospital, in Cold Overton Road, Oakham. They are currently recruiting for three full-time qualified nursing staff.

The hospital has 16 beds providing palliative, end of life, rehabilitation, and sub-acute care.

Ward sister Claire Haines said: “We are looking for nurses who are forward thinking, confident in their decision-making, and who can put the patient at the centre of care.”

Sue Durrance has been at the hospital for nine years as a staff nurse, and before that she worked there as a healthcare assistant. She said: “I love working here, we have got a fantastic team, and we really support one another.”

Lara, a healthcare assistant, said: “It is a fantastic place to work, really friendly, professional, and we deliver excellent care.”

Ruth, another healthcare assistant, said: “There are lots of opportunities to develop our skills, and we are a really good team.”

Zoe Harris, hospital matron, said: “We offer a friendly environment and fantastic team working. We regularly seek the views and feedback from our patients and relatives through our Friends and Family survey and we are getting fantastic results. If you are looking for your next career move, then please contact us. We really look forward to hearing from you.”

Applications are welcome from qualified nurses interested in full and part-time work, permanent or who want to join the staff bank. They can request standard or long shift patterns, predominant day shifts or predominant night shifts.
